Hindu Quiz

We have a new section that promises to be both fun and informative! Please scroll down to the end of this newsletter to see if you got the answers right.

Q1. In 1967, a person in India was watching a quiz show on Indian Television and noticed something surprising. The students on the show could easily answer questions about Greek and Roman stories, but they didn't know much about Indian stories and history. This made the person want to do something to help Indian students learn more about their own country's history, mythology and folklore. He started a new project to make learning about India's history fun and interesting for students. What is the name of the person (X) who had this idea, and what is the name of the project (Y) they started?

Q2. Long ago, a special power let a wise man watch a big battle far away and tell the story to a king who could not see. A famous writer named Valmiki got this power too, and it helped him write a great story that many people in India still read today. Now, we use this word a lot when we talk about movies and TV shows. What is this power that Sanjaya and Valmiki had?
